Use Lime on Haiku

Soil Says Krauss

Most Crops Cannot Do Their Best Without Lime—Treatment Not Expensive—Pineapples Apparently an Exception to Rule.

That the soils of Haiku are generally deficient in lime, is the assertion of Prof. Krauss, of the Hawaii experiment station. Prof. Krauss states that the unwillingness of legumes and some other crops to do well in Haiku is undoubtedly due to this cause. This is particularly noticeable just at present in connection with the considerable acreage of Maui red beans planted in the Kula district, which are not growing as they should. In a number of instances where lime has been used, the difference is very marked. Mr. Krauss has also shown that a judicious liming greatly improves the soil for onions in the district.

That the trouble can be remedied at comparatively small cost is indicated, however, from the fact that hydrated lime of excellent quality for the purpose, can be secured from the Maui Agricultural Store at $8 per ton. A ton of this to the acre is recommended.

Besides supplying the deficiency in the soil, the lime in many instances serves to correct the acidity common to many new lands before they have had time to become well aerated. Pineapples, however, do not appear to suffer from this lack of lime, or from soil acidity.

HEAVY SPOILAGE IN FRESH PINE.

Not very encouraging was the report received from the first shipment of fresh pine made to the coast by the Kula homesteaders, something near one-third of the shipment being lost. Returns from the second shipment have not yet arrived. It is estimated that even with the loss just noted, the shippers made about as much as they would have made in selling to the canneries. No shipment was made by last week's Lurline, on account of the interference of the congressional party with things at Haiku. It is hoped, however, to secure better results in the future, as more experience is gained.

Marketing Division to Have Branch on Coast

After the first of July the Marketing Division will have a representative on the Coast, according to a letter recently received from Superintendent Longley. He says: "We will have an experienced man in San Francisco to look after shipments and build up a fresh fruit trade for Hawaiian pineapples throughout the States. We do not, of course, expect to do wonders the first year, but we hope to get the machinery in working order, so that next year a great many more tons can be marketed. "Most of our shipments to the Coast have reached in very good condition. Only once in a great while does a shipment show any spoilage and no shipment to date has netted the producer a profit of less than $7 a ton. One shipment netted an Oahu man between $30 and $35 in the field."

Better Prices for Small Pines

The price of pineapples will be low for at least another year. This is now accepted among the growers. But Maui producers seem to be somewhat better off than those of Oahu. Here the price that the canners will pay for seconds has been raised from $5.00 to $8.00, while growers without contracts on Oahu are glad to get this figure for firsts. The Maui price for first grade remains $11.25. So far as can be learned here, the canners have not made any extensive sale of their coming pack, so that the contract arrangement with the homesteaders, by which they are to be paid on the basis of the price made on May 1, seems to have slipped a cog. In fact the homesteaders do not know how the price they are being offered was arrived at. Inasmuch as the excessive rains last summer seriously damaged the plants, and as a consequence there will be an unusually heavy proportion of small fruit, the raising of the price of seconds will be much appreciated.

PINEAPPLE DISEASES INTEREST EXPERT.

H. L. Lyon, pathologist of the Sugar Planters' experiment station, who was on Maui last week, expressed much interest in some of the pineapple diseases troubling the growers in some parts of the territory. He has already made some study of the wilt diseases on Kaula and Oahu, but which is not believed to be present on this island. Prof. Krauss, superintendent of the federal experiment station's extension division, is much gratified at Mr. Lyon's interest, which may be of immense value.

F. F. BALDWIN'S FINE PERCHERONS.

By the Lurline last week, two magnificent Percheron stallions arrived at Maui from the coast and are now in quarantine at Camp 1. They are the property of Manager Frank Baldwin of Punahoa, and were purchased by him during his recent trip. One of the animals was imported from France, and the other, although American bred, is scarcely less worthy. It is claimed by horsemen who have seen the animals that they are probably two of the finest draft animals ever brought to the Islands.

Dr. J. H. Raymond left for Honolulu last evening to attend a meeting of the Territorial land board, of which he is a member.

AUTO DRIVER FINED $50.

Fuji, a Japanese chauffeur of Lahaina, was fined $50 on Thursday, by District Magistrate John Brown, Jr., on conviction of heedless and furious driving. The driver ran over a small Hawaiian boy, painfully, but not dangerously, injuring him.

L. Hubert and Kiyosaga, both automobile drivers of Lahaina, were found not guilty of a like charge, by Judge Brown. The two were recently arrested after their cars had collided at a Lahaina street corner.
